“Dad, you touched many souls in this lifetime. I wish I could hear these stories about you, from you instead of others. You’re the coolest dad I could ask for. We rode hoverboards together, watched professional wrestling together, played video games together, and so much more. You were very optimistic. Even with your health you still wanted to go back to Jamaica with me and my sister, visit me in Nebraska, and travel to see my little brother whenever you could. Sometimes you would call and tell me all these places you wanted to travel to, and I felt I knew more about your health than you did yourself. But you never let that change your mind. You fought until you couldn’t. I’ll never forget how hard you fought for my siblings. A lot of us know all you wanted was to raise your children YOUR way, in YOUR house. Every opportunity you had unfortunately never went your way. However, you and your 2nd son are together for eternity now. You’ll forever have that opportunity to guide each other through the streets of heaven. I hope heaven has hoverboards for you and Quintay to have fun and ride around on, like we did back in the day.

Rest In Heaven pops.
