“ We met the Guys around 1970 when they moved in next door to us on Broadway. From the start, their son Rennie & my son Michael were absolute best friends. Especially during the summer, when Rosie was not teaching & I had a day off, our houses rang with the wonderful noise of the kids playing & being at each others' houses. Rosie was Michael and Shannon's 2nd mother, and I was Rennie's. Never never were there better neighbors. My husband Bob & Roy spent many hours just sitting on their back patio chatting. Rosie Guy was one of the kindest, most patient women I've ever met. The boys knew that, if they got in trouble, I would be the one "hollering", and Rosie would just be "disappointed." That was far worse than my chiding. She told me once that she hoped I hadn't minded that she picked some wild poke behind our garage - I said fine, but when she cooked it, would she share? Of course there weren't any leftovers. And each Christmas she spent hours (and maybe days) making chitluns for Christmas dinner. Again I was promised a taste, but all those men in the house never left a scrap! After Michael died, I took his son Andy by our old house on Broadway, and Rosie was home and invited us in. She and all the Guys will always be in my heart. I hope that Roy and Michael were there to welcome her into God's kingdom.
